

If you disagree with the figures on this notice, you have thirty (30) calendar days from the date of the notice to file an appeal with the Will County Board of Review. Failure to file an appeal within that time forfeits your right to appeal. The dates of publication are August 7th and August 8th of 2024.

Step #2: Talk with your local township assessor.

Many times simply talking with your assessor will clear up any issues you have with your assessment. Assessors are usually very busy after assessment notices are published, so don't wait to talk to them. You can find your assessor's contact information on the front of your assessment notice.

Step #4: Determine the fair market value of your home, and check to see if your assessment is comparable to sales and assessments and sales of similar homes in your neighborhood.

It's important to know the market value of your home before you file an appeal. You can look at recent sales of similar properties in your area to make that determination. Many assessors have websites that allow you to view your neighbors' assessment values. Other resources for assessment and sales information include www.willcountysoa.com, Multiple Listing Service (MLS), personal knowledge, and the Will County Supervisor of Assessments Office.

Please note that while assessment information obtained from the Supervisor of Assessments and its website is available to help you investigate assessments, it will not be given much weight as evidence.

[illegible]

Appeals must be filed with the Board of Review no later than 30 calendar days after the date of this notice.

Step #3: Check that the property characteristics are correct on your property record card.

Property record cards are kept in your assessor's office. The cards contain relevant information about your property like square footage, year built, etc. The Supervisor of Assessments and some township assessors have websites with property record card information as well. However, you must use copies of original property record cards when submitting evidence for your appeal.

[illegible]

Step #5: Determine the basis for your appeal.

You can file an appeal based on one or more of the following reasons:

- 1) Recent Sale: The assessor has placed a market value estimate on your parcel that is higher than the actual market value.
- 2) Comparable Sales: The assessment is higher than those of similar properties in your area.
- 3) Assessment Equity: The assessment is based on inaccurate parcel characteristics.
- 4) Recent Construction: The subject property was recently purchased, and the assessment is higher than 33.33% of the purchase price.

Step #6: Compile evidence and file a formal written complaint.

Once you've determined your basis for appeal, you can formally file a written complaint with the Will County Board of Review. You must follow the Board of Review's directions for filing an appeal. Failure to comply fully with all the rules and requests of the Board of Review may result in the dismissal of your appeal. The Board only accepts official appeal forms. Letters stating your objection to your assessment do not constitute a formal appeal. All appeal forms and evidence must be delivered or postmarked by the deadline. It is preferred that you submit your appeal electronically at borappeals.willcountysa.com.

The deadline to file an appeal for 2024 is September 9, 2024.

Recommended types of evidence include:

- An appraisal (The appraisal needs to use comparables prior to January 1st of the current year, which is what your assessments would be based upon.)
- Copies of property record cards from your assessor
- List of recent sales of similar properties
- Photographs of subject property and comparables
- Characteristic information for subject property and comparables (bedrooms, bathrooms, square footage, garages, lots, etc.)
- Real estate transfer declaration or other sale evidence
